Dear EPA Grantee:

We understand that the Environmental Protection Agency is beginning to require of all grantees professional level surveys of archaeological and historical sites prior to the onset of construction. This is to ensure compliance with various federal laws and regulations including E.O. 11593 and Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act.

For that reason I want to introduce our firm, for we can help you meet this EPA requirement.

C-R-C specializes in performing these archaeological and historical surveys.

What you may ask is involved?

We study the project area to identify and assess the significance of all historic and archaeological sites. We then evaluate the impact of your project on any significant sites. In our report we either document that no significant sites will be affected or, if such sites are present, recommend ways to comply with federal regulations so that you can proceed with your planning.

Our staff and consultants combine professional training -- both history and archaeology -- with practical experience. We understand EPA's regulations as well as those of other federal and state agencies and can make suggestions that may simplify the approval process. Of equal importance, we have worked with municipalities, both large and small and become familiar with their day-to-day problems and concerns for meeting schedules and deadlines.
