SECTION 4.0: SPECIFICATIONS/SCOPE OF SERVICES

- 4.1. General/Background: As the largest municipality between Salt Lake City, Utah and Denver, Colorado, Grand Junction routinely serves the residents of Grand Junction, the residents of the Grand Valley from Palisade to the east and Fruita to the west, as well as all Mesa County residents. The City's population is 63,775 of the total Mesa County population of 149,249. The median household income in Grand Junction is $49,322. The City, regardless of its regional position for service delivery, is the only sizable city on the Western Slope and in the state that does not have a community recreation center. Several previous efforts have been attempted; however, they have lacked the necessary private business and community buy-in for success.

The 1992 Parks, Recreation, and Open Space Master Plan identified the need for a regional park in the north-central area of the City, resulting in the acquisition of the 205 acre Matchett Park property in 1996. Because of competing priorities in park development, the land was never master planned until 2014. The master plan's focus was on outdoor park elements; however, a footprint for a future community recreation center was identified in the completed master plan. The park master planning process garnered a great deal of community input with several thousand people participating in person and online. Although the community center was not a component of the park planning process, it was requested more than any other park element. This overwhelming feedback resulted in the formation of PLACE (People for Local Activities and Community Enrichment). PLACE is a diverse group of Grand Junction residents committed to the creation of an affordable, accessible community center that would be the heart of wellness and social connection in the City and surrounding areas and a place to "meet, move, learn, and play".

PLACE has developed a strategy to cultivate a grassroots campaign to increase public awareness and support while gaining citizen input, with significant collaboration from the City of Grand Junction. To date, PLACE has undertaken 40 activities to increase public awareness and support, while gaining citizen input. These include house meetings, focus groups, informational presentations, and tabling at events that have stimulated interest in a community center across a wide range of people, organizations, and public officials. The group has circulated a petition of support for the community center that has been signed by over 1,600 citizens to date. An online survey has garnered 672 responses, and continues to collect community feedback. PLACE runs a Facebook page that records the increasing media attention and the comments that its efforts are generating.

Thanks to fundraising from the PLACE committee and a Department of Local Affairs grant, the City of Grand Junction is ready to complete a feasibility study for a community recreation center.

4.2. Special Conditions/Provisions:

- This process is envisioned to be a two-pronged process including consultation for feasibility study and conceptual design, so it is essential that an appropriate team of professionals be included.
- Consultants must have a minimum of five years of experience of design and consultation for full service, modern, and innovative community recreation centers (inclusive of leisure and competitive aquatic features, gymnasiums, fitness, community space, and other amenities).
- Consultants must provide contact information for the last five community recreation center design and consultation processes of similar size and scope to a 75,000 square foot center.
- Pricing shall be established as "a guaranteed maximum price" of $50,000, and shall be all inclusive to include but not be limited to: all design, labor, supplies, materials, travel, meetings, conference calls, fuel, and all other costs related to and/or associated with the successful completion of the project. It is the consultant's responsibility to have a full understanding of all project objectives, responsibilities, and tasks necessary and required for the successful completion of the project.

The Owner shall not pay nor be liable for any other additional costs including but not limited to: taxes, shipping charges, insurance, interest, penalties, termination payments, attorney fees, liquidated damages, etc.

4.3. Specifications/Scope of Services:

Critical elements to consider in this project will include (these are not inclusive issues of the center, but are a list of important considerations):

- Location – An analysis of locations in addition to Matchett Park is necessary. Also, consideration of one, large center versus smaller neighborhood centers is needed.
- PLACE and Community Involvement – A well thought out public participation process will be required to develop relationships with the PLACE committee and general public. Stakeholders will include representation from PLACE, local non-profits, private fitness operators, healthcare industry, youth, and seniors.
- Balancing Park and Community Center Impacts – Upon development, Matchett Park will be Grand Junction’s largest park. It is envisioned to be a combination of a neighborhood park (picnic shelters, grassy areas, playgrounds, trails, etc.) and a large regional park (multipurpose fields, ice rink, community center, outdoor aquatic facility, etc.). Balancing the impacts to the neighbors and planning for adequate parking, access, and circulation will be critical.
- Public/Private Partnerships and Economic Development – The City of Grand Junction is open to creative partnerships within the operation of the community center including, but not limited to, leased space and programming.

Tasks

Deliverables would include project overview, market analysis, site analysis, programming, conceptual plans, operational analysis, partnership opportunities, and final reporting. An extensive public process was used for the park’s planning process, and this community center process will build upon that base to determine community needs and programming elements. Public involvement will be a critical component and is envisioned to include:

- A minimum of three public meetings; ability to conduct “real-time” surveying is preferred
- A minimum of three Stakeholder meetings
- It is assumed that additional meetings can be conducted by staff with reporting back to the consultant team

An effort extending no more than seven months is envisioned. We welcome individual / unique approaches, and provide the following as a basic outline:

Project Overview

- Develop purpose and goals
- Review all current plans, surveys, and past planning efforts
- Identify constraints and parameters including but not limited to funding, local economy, site options, and public support

Market Analysis

- Service area identification
- Demographic and community profile
